

Overcoming Email Marketing Challenges

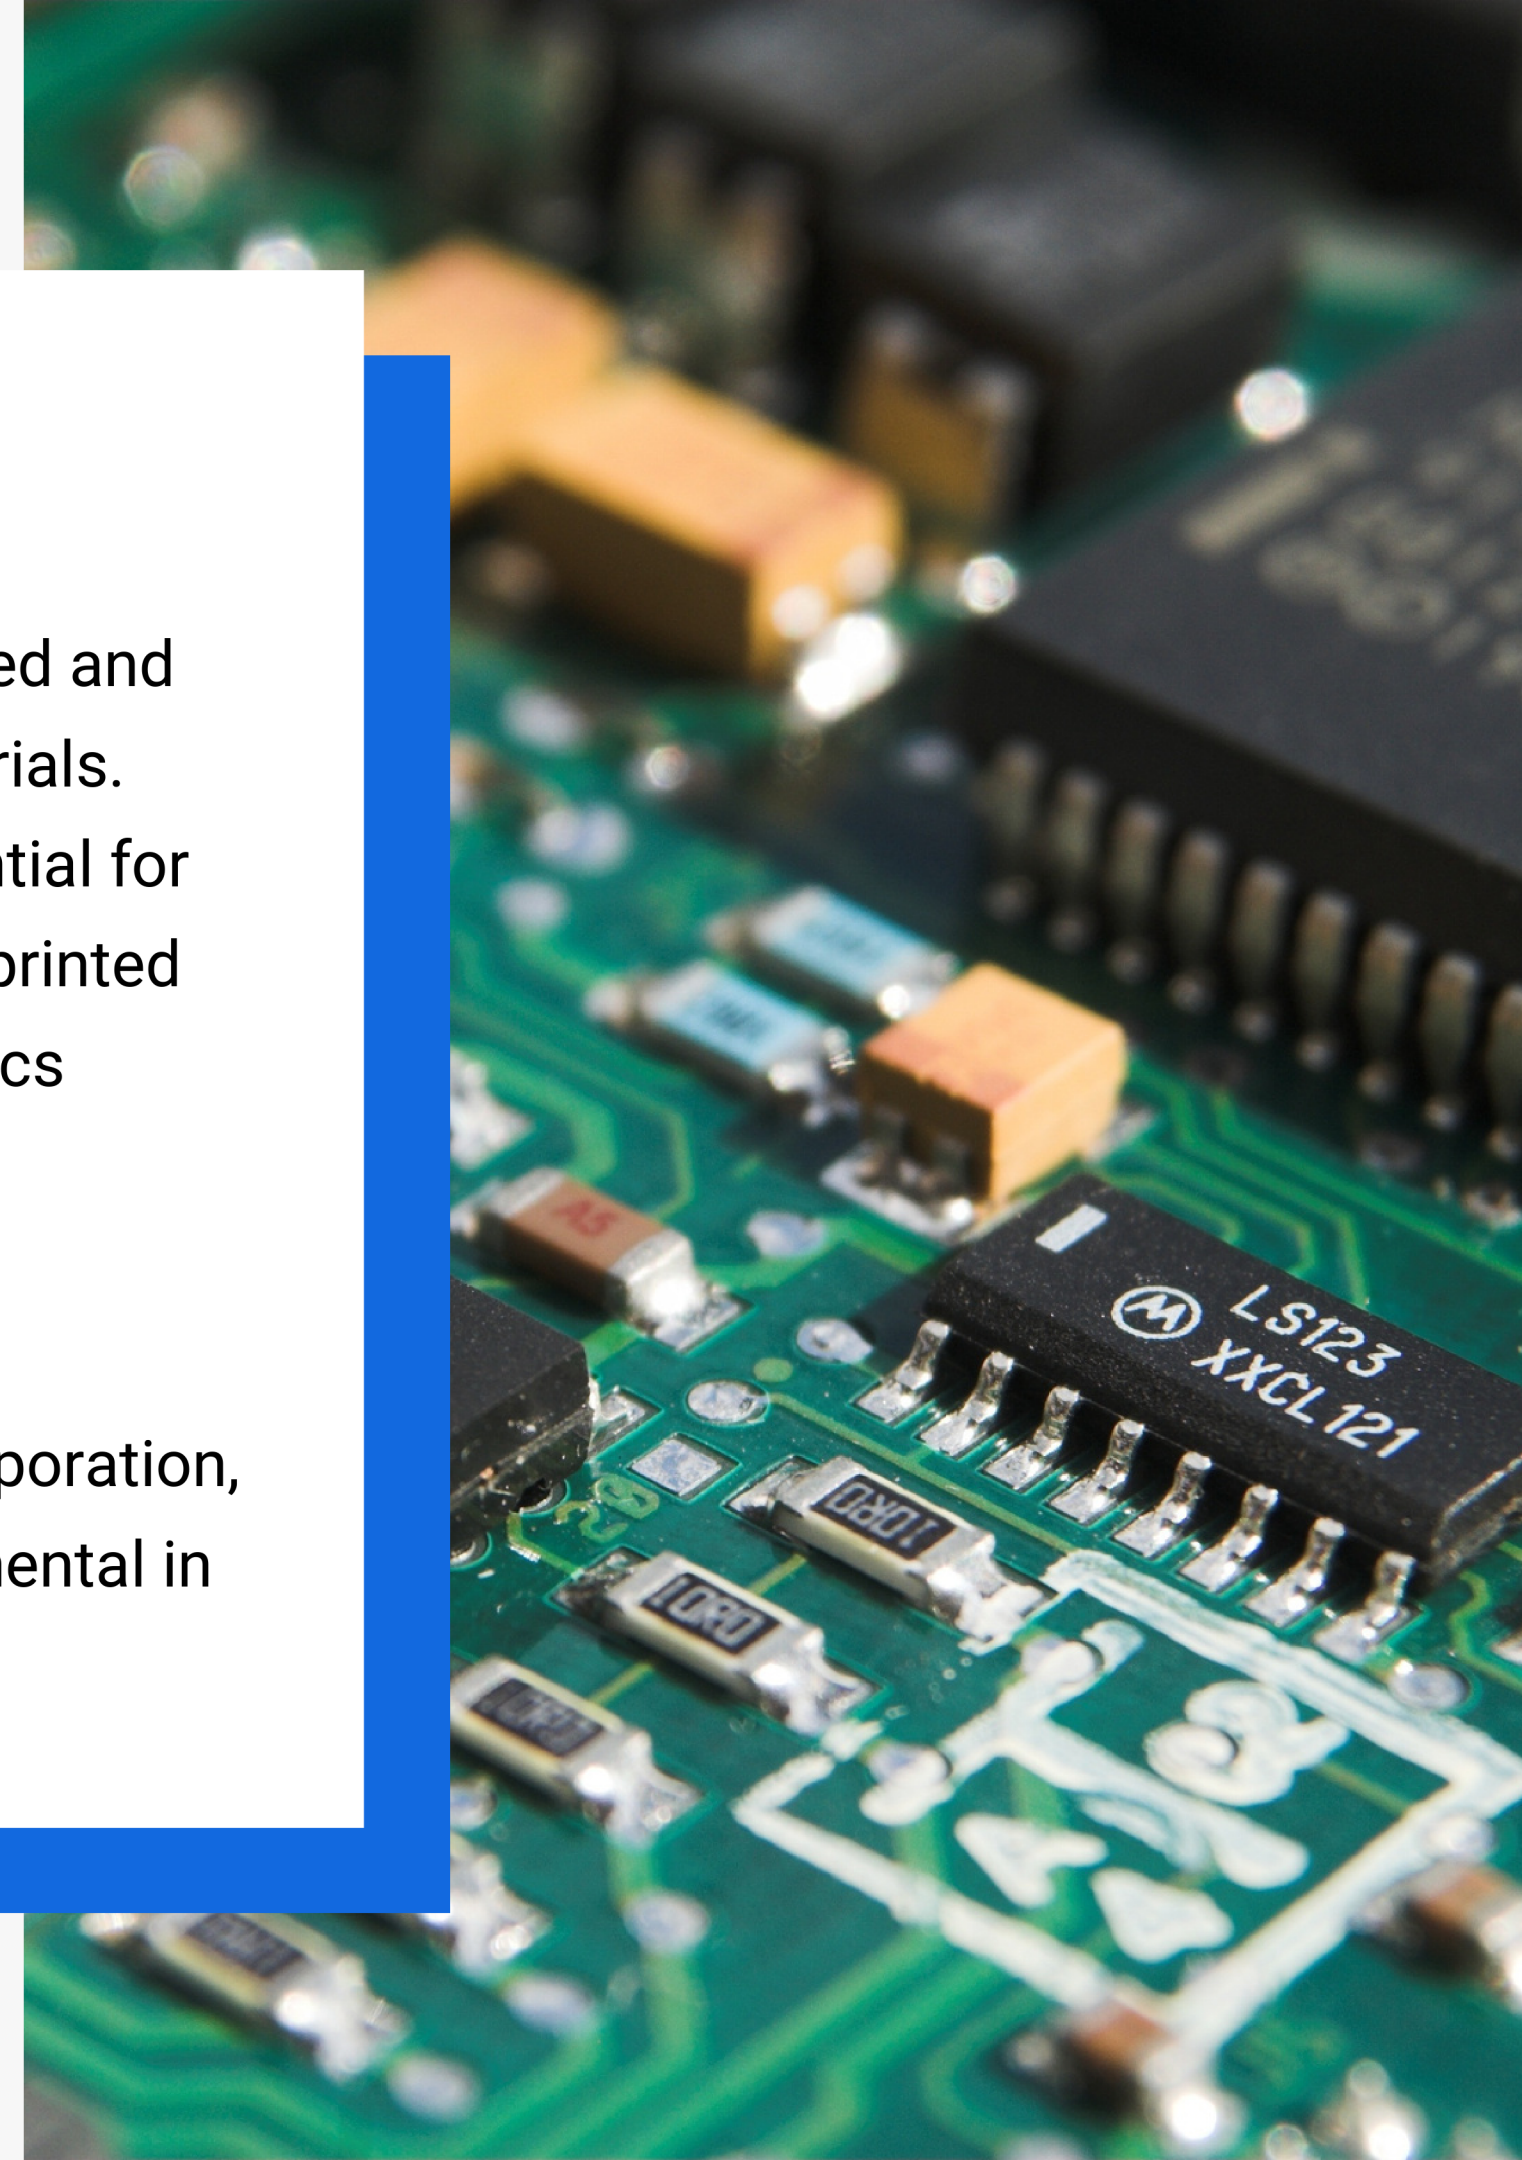

A case study on how Campaigner's Creative Services team collaborated with OX3 Corporation to resolve their email marketing dilemmas

About OX3 Corporation

Since 1972, OX3 has proudly served as America's oldest family-owned and operated non-durable wholesaler of semiconductor packaging materials. Specializing in engineering and importing packaging solutions essential for the storage, transport, and placement of semiconductors and other printed circuit board components, OX3 is committed to serving the electronics industry by providing the materials and expertise needed to bring components to the point of automated assembly.

An exclusive interview with Gus Widmayer, President of the OX3 Corporation, reveals how Campaigner's Creative Services Team has been instrumental in their marketing success.

Could you share the challenges you encountered prior to engaging with our Creative Services team, and how did our team contribute to addressing these issues?

Before partnering with Campaigner's Creative Services team, my experience with various third-party direct marketing companies left me hopping between solutions without achieving our goal of maintaining and reaching our client base efficiently. In general, we felt that most support professionals were lacking experience or did not have a detailed understanding of the coordination between their software and our needs. They each also only dealt with part of the process – leaving the remainder for me to do myself.

How did our team contribute to addressing these issues?

The Creative Services team at Campaigner not only addressed my immediate needs but also laid the groundwork for a robust infrastructure that now supports our bi-monthly email campaigns. The team's commitment to enhancing the design and copy elements of our email campaigns was evident in their diligence. In short, with Campaigner, I get the professional knowledge of individuals who meet remarkably exacting standards.

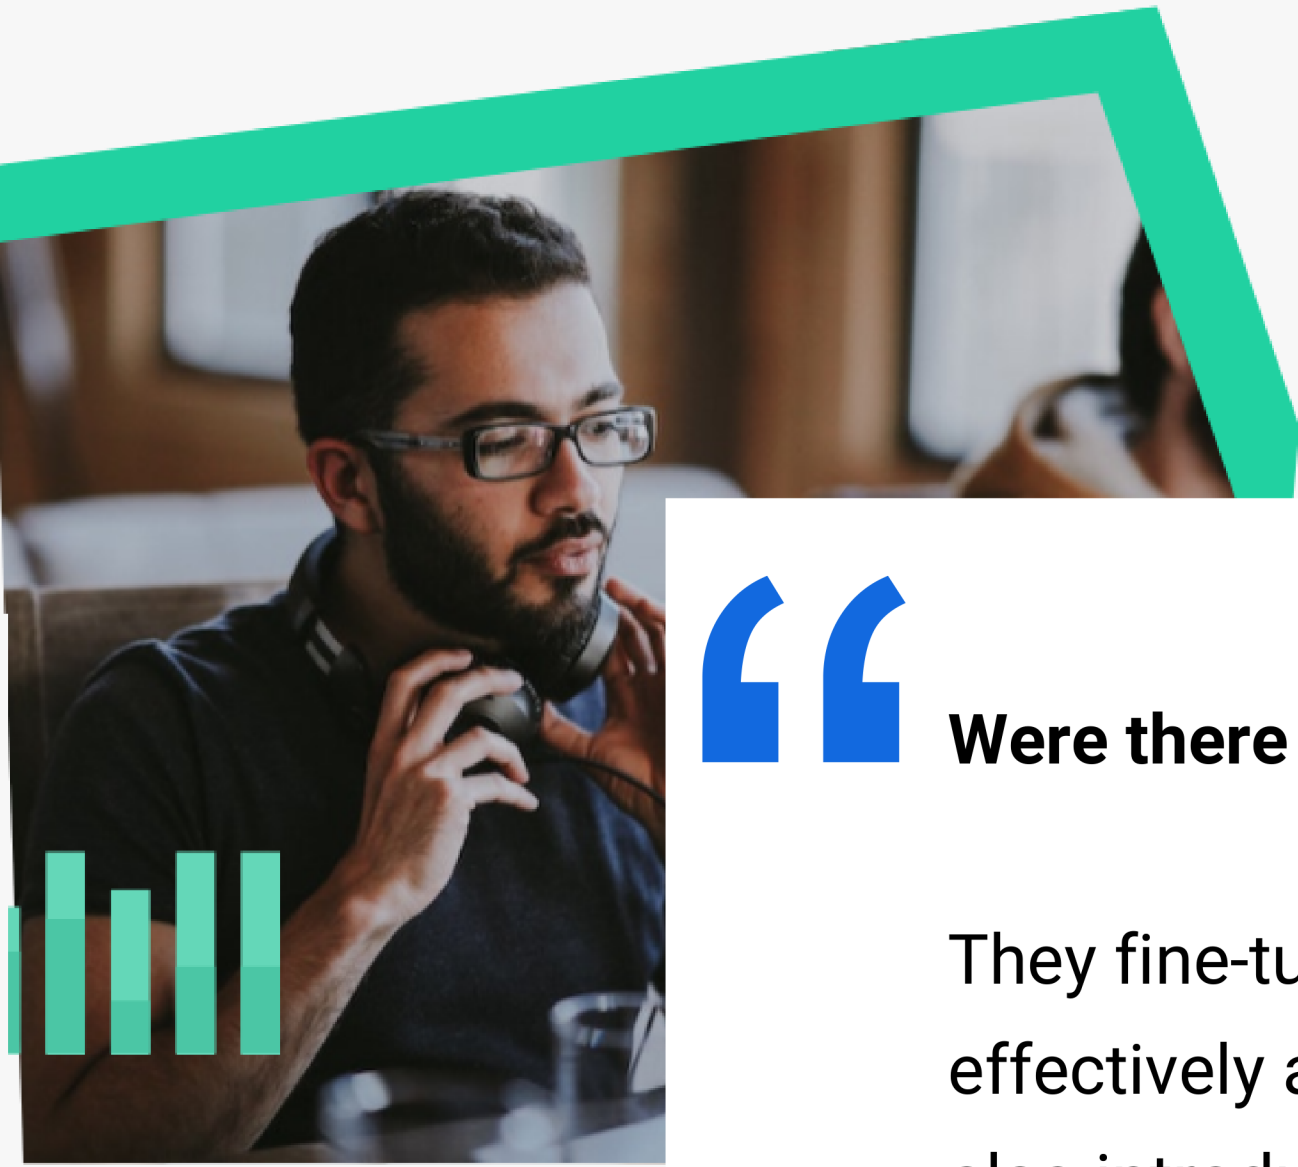

How did our Creative Services Team collaborate with your team throughout the project?

Working with Campaigner's Creative Services Team has been an exceptionally positive and rewarding experience. Their highly efficient team of professionals takes care of the heavy lifting, allowing me to focus on other aspects of the project. The collaboration has been seamless, and their effective communication and streamlined processes stood out throughout the entire project.

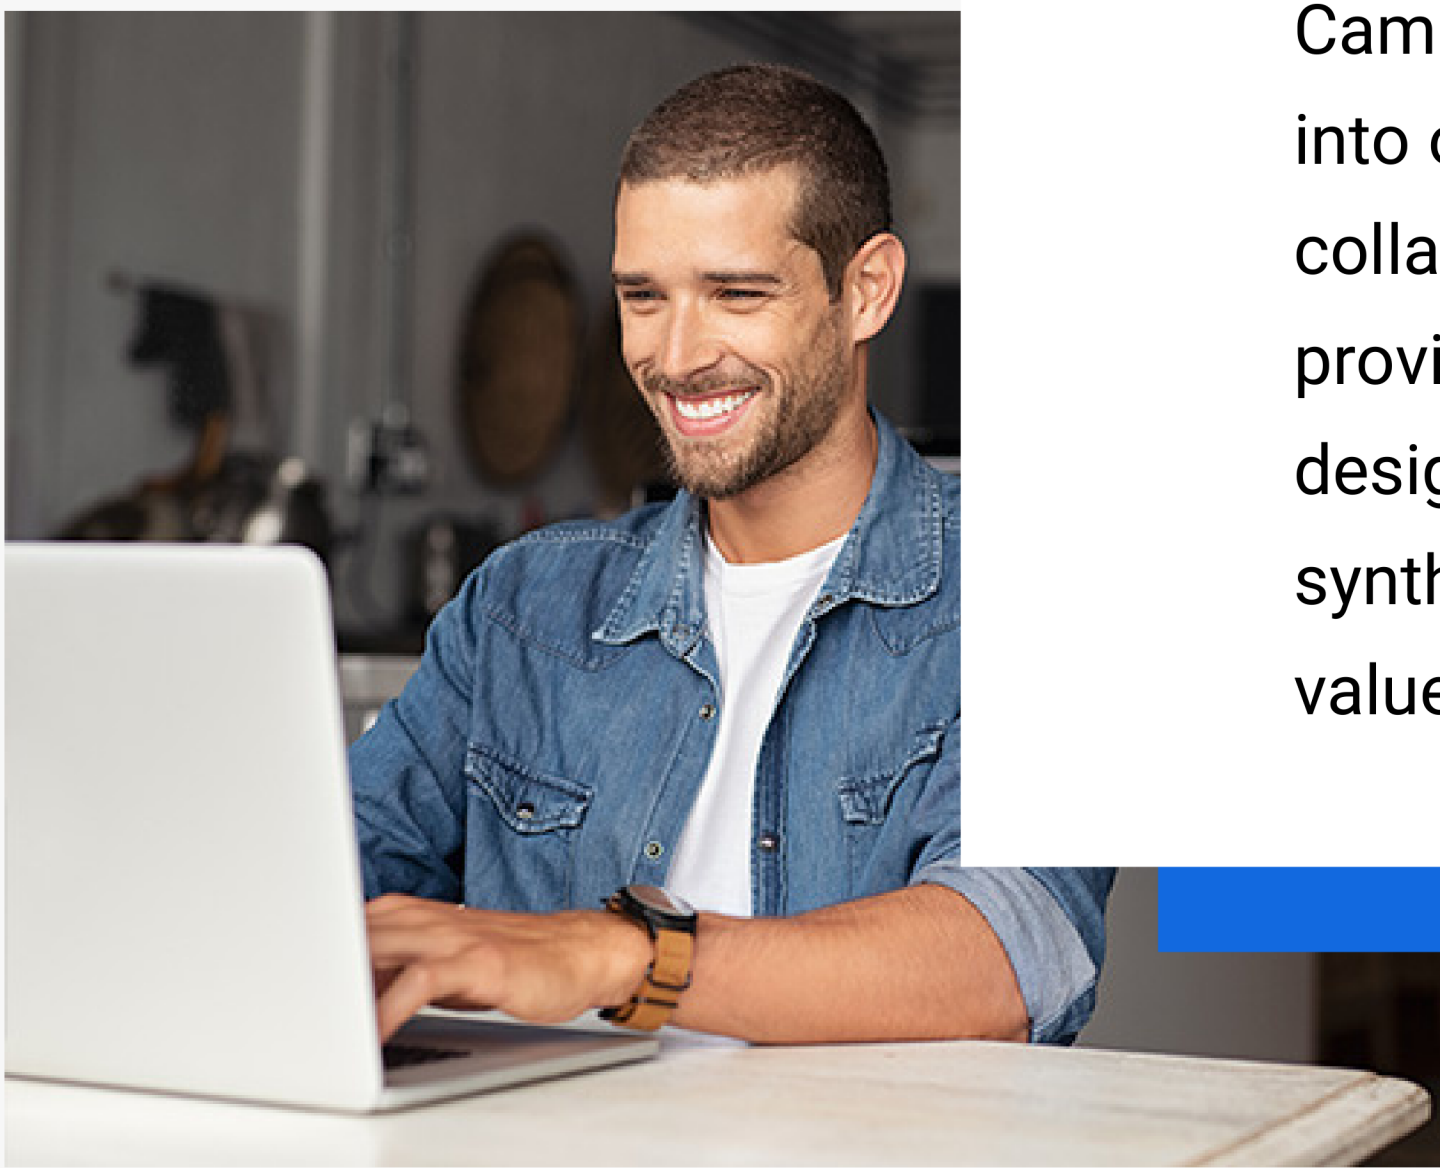

Were there any notable communications or processes that stood out?

They fine-tuned the messaging to convey our brand message effectively and engage our audience in a compelling manner. The team also introduced efficiencies that significantly reduced turnaround times without compromising on quality. With Campaigner, the software and the people work together with outstanding results.

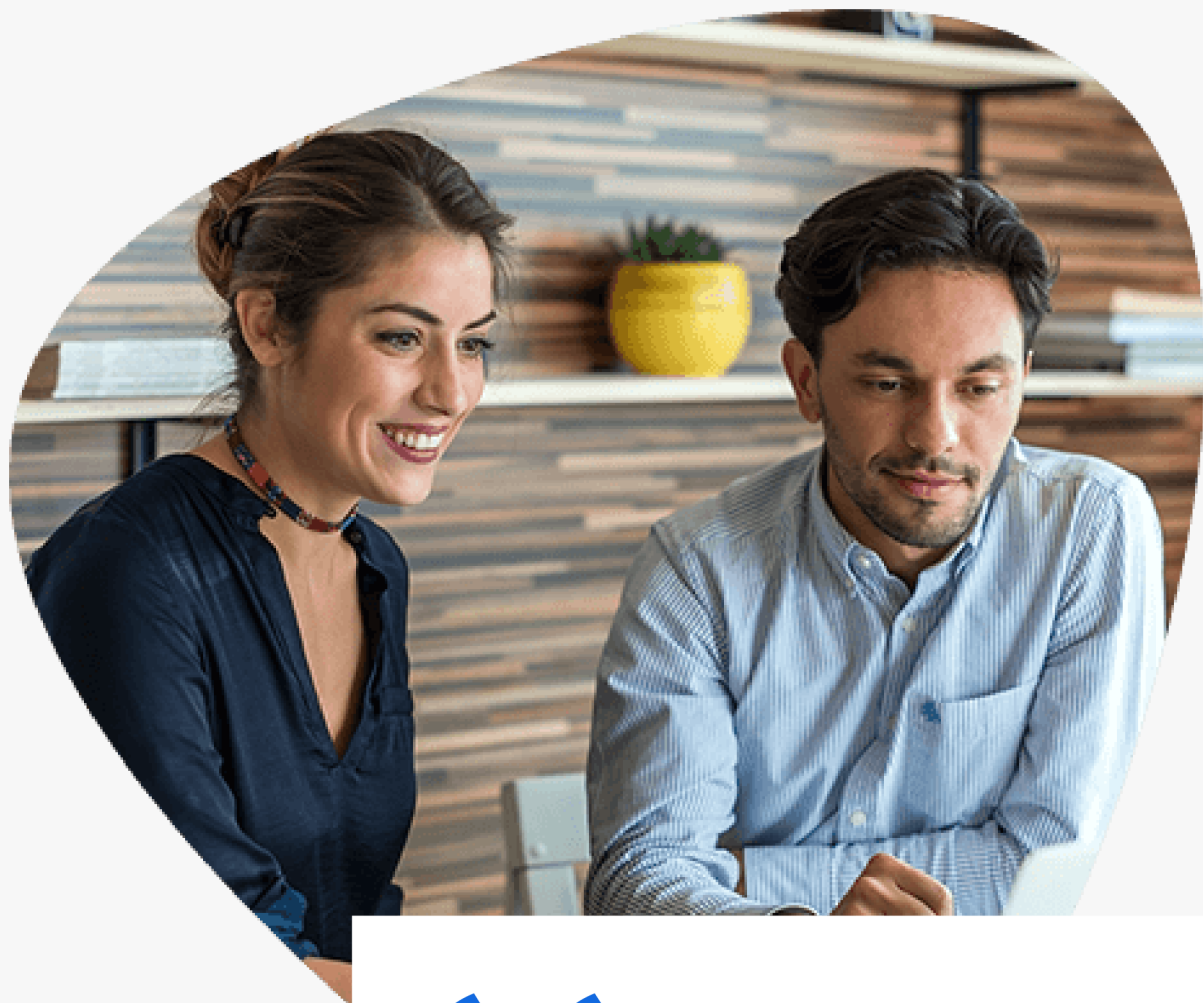

How has our team integrated and functioned as an extension of your marketing team, and can you share specific instances where their efforts have been exceptional or surpassed your expectations?

Campaigner's Creative Services team has seamlessly integrated into our marketing team, operating as a valuable extension. The collaboration with the team has been particularly noteworthy, providing an effortless environment in which to work on the design and copy of our email campaigns. The team's ability to synthesize ideas and deliver top-tier output has added immense value to our marketing efforts.

Can you share specific instances where their efforts have been exceptional or surpassed your expectations?

The team is exceptionally bright. Without any prior experience in my company's products and services, they have been able to write copy for a dozen semi-monthly email campaigns. This has taken enormous time-pressure off my shoulders. The Account Manager team has also followed through on every question and resolved any problem as it arose.
